A Natural
RemedyTime was when disease was thought to be due to the direct influence of evil spirits, and exorcism and magic were invoked to cast it out.Science has taught us wisdom. The evil spirits exist still. We call them "Disease Germs," and they also must be cast out. Once lodged in the stomach or intestines, fever with its hallucinations, or biliousness with its aches and pains, is the result.ENO'S
FRUIT SALTis the approved remedy for driving out disease germs. Its action is quick and thorough. It clears the intestines, rouses the torpid liver to new life, stimulates the mucous membrane to a healthy action, and cleanses and invigorates the whole digestive tract.It may be safely taken at any time by young or old.It is very effective in the early stage of Diarrhoea by removing the irritating cause.Be prepared for emergencies by always keeping a bottle in the house.

THE OPEN GOLF
CHAMPION, writes:14, LOWER MADDOCK ROAD,

July 24th, 1912.

Messrs. F. & J. Smith

Dear Sirs,

I might say that I have been a regular smoker of your Glasgow Mixture for the last twelve years, and I might also say that I cannot find any tobacco to suit me like it. In my opinion if Golf Players would smoke your famous Glasgow Mixture they would find it very soothing to the nerves, as I am sure I do when having to play strenuous Golf matches such as the Open Championship, etc. Yours truly, E. RAY.SMITH'S

THE OTHER HERO.

"What are you looking at?"

A portrait of one of the new V.C.s. I know him."Barrow passed the paper to his friend,
who looked at the photograph.

"A bright face," he said.

"Yes," replied Barrow. "Jim—this one—and his brother they called Jimmie—was, you know, I knew them when they could only scramble in the stock yard, and think I must go down and see the old people again."He looked out into the quiet square, dreming. The London trees became the sage of his country, and the pavement
was the courtyard of the old homestead:
Barrow on the right hand side, where every one walks, decked with wall-flowers and
willowherb on the left where no one walks.
Why it should be so, none can tell. Habit
is made by the place itself.

"Yes, I must go down," said Barrow.

II.

The courtyard was as he had seen it in his waking dream, blue and gold in the sunlight after a thunder-shower. There was a
sage of his country, and the pavement
was the courtyard of the old homestead:
Barrow on the right hand side, where every
one walks, decked with wall-flowers and
willowherb on the left where no one walks.
Why it should be so, none can tell. Habit
is made by the place itself.

III.

The clock gave its warning—startling in
the stillness of the house—on a stroke five.
As though by magic the place was suddenly alive again. The music of the clock was followed by other music. Clang! It was a milk pail on the stone floor of the kitchen.
Clang! Another pail. Then a man's deep voice, then a scuffling noise of the pails
being lifted, steps going down to the dairy.
Then the shrill scream of the separator, muffled by two heavy doors. Barrow walked into the kitchen."Well!" exclaimed Mrs. Ramsden;
"well, there! Come in, Mr. Barrow."
Come in, she stood with a silver teapot in one hand, a bundle of silver spoons
in the other. Her clean white apron fell in ample folds, beautiful to see. "Well!"
she cried again. "You're hearty welcome."And then Ramsden himself came in, red and jovial as ever, echoing his wife with a gleeful optimism. "Well!" and adding,
as though for sake of certainty, "I'm sure." Then he rubbed his hands on his trousers and begged his visitor to be seated.
"Go on to the parlour, missus," he said,
"I'm going to see you, missus," he said,

CROSSING THE BAR.

Tennyson's little poem, Crossing the Bar, has been much criticised for its faultry imagery on the ground that at the moment when the speaker "meets his last face to face," he would have no more use for him, but might have needed him badly before. A gentleman who inserts a memorandum notice in the "Englishman" (Calcutta) avoids all such vagueness and uncertainty. He inserts the notice "In sad and fond memory of my dear wife, Elizabeth Marie (Bessie), who dropped her pilot and sailed for the Great Beyond August 15, 1914—Mumbai."
This is decidedly more naïveté, but evidently refers to another pilot—apparently the bereaved husband.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

New Aims and Methods in Religious Training.The scope of a new institution at Lin-ingham which aims at nothing less than a revolution in the Sunday School was explained to a representative of the "Daily News" by Mr. G. Hamilton
Archibald, who came over from Canada
some ten years ago as the apostle of a new era in the religious training of the young.Mr. Archibald has many disciples in all the churches, and for eight years past an undenominational institution has been hard at work under his direction equipping teachers who have gone out as missionaries of the new system. This institution was housed at West Hill, Sally Oak, given for the purpose by Mr. and Mrs. Barrow Cadbury. Now, however, it has outgrown its original quarters, and a new building has been erected on a conspicuous site, the gift of Mr. George Cadbury, where, thanks to the generous support of a number of friends, it will be possible greatly to enlarge the scope of the work. Resident students to the number of about thirty are provided for."Our teaching," says Mr. Archibald, is based upon a study of the psychology
of the child in its gradual development.
We teach the old truths, but in a new way. The great thing is to encourage the child to express itself. We do not attempt to stereotype individuality. Thereare many ways in which this self-expression can be developed and moulded. For infants, sand, plasticine, blocks, and other such media are largely employed,
and manual exercises enter into the training of the growing boys and girls."The spirit of a child is wonderfully sensitive to the best music, the finest pictures, and the noblest poetry when they are interpreted by those who teach
not as a stern duty, but with the heart of a child."The new training college, which will soon be opened, is able to draw upon the scholarly resources of Woodbrooke Settlement, in association with which it is to be conducted.

THE DANUBE

The Danube is once more in the public mind as the river of many confessions. None of it, however, is Turkish now, and the point has been removed from the verses of LIFE AT THE ZOO.

GERMAN AND HIS NEW GUINEA BABOON INTERVIEW.

The nations may rage fiercely together and battle clouds hang over fair countries like a pall, but the Zoo provides pleasure for all. For the children it is a wonderful world, where they can see lions, tigers, bears, elephants, snakes, and beautiful birds, which, in the rich imagination of childhood, have hitherto only inhabited playground jungles.

Now it is only the pleasureland of the children and their elders; it is now a haven for sick and wounded soldiers, a place where they can forget recent sufferings and dangers and enjoy the gentle sun of autumn days. The long blue gowms and red ties are common in the gardens; only less so than the blue of the uniforms of the soldiers who have come from overseas.

Life flows on placidly at the Zoo, and if the animals and birds have been quick to know "at some of the keepers have gone to war, they have not found the Belgian refugees who have filled the vacancies less attentive.

It is quite candid, though, some of the Zoo community could afford to be more independent, these days. As a couple of old black bears, with sly winks and knowing twirls of their shaggy heads, confided to me, "We are coming just now (nearly) to the end of our tether. The story is to this effect:—Outside the Gardens there lived a German who had a baboon taming from New Guinea. This baboon, it is known, was always up to tricks, and was a perpetual object of suspicion. When the war broke out the German made his arrangements, and, speaking generally, felt himself to be very comfortable, enjoying the privileges bestowed by an easy-going Government. Then one day people decided that the Government should be easy-going no longer, so the German was interned, and his baboon was sent to the Zoo.

The baboon is not exhibited just now, but confined to the sanatorium, as are all new arrivals to the Gardens. He looked very sober and subdued.

In the next cage to that of the interned "alien" are two young Orang Outangs which have just been brought from Borneo by a British officer. He is not yet known whether Mr. and Mrs. Outang are making the Gardens their permanent home. Mrs. Outang looked the reverse of enthusiastic, but possibly it was her neighbour she did not like.

Other recent additions to this rather exclusive society circle are five bears, the mascot of various Canadian battalions, and four Indian elk, the mascot of one of the Warwickshire regiments. There is no doubt that the average person's knowledge of geography has increased owing to the many spheres of war, and this fact seems to be reflected in Zoo conversation, for it is quite a common experience to overhear references to this animal and that bird as having come from countries closely associated with the war.

idea for me! Thank you," said the Emperor. He walked a few yards away to a small improvised cemetery, where he had buried our dead that morning, and taking his helmet off, he placed one flower on each grave, whilst the men stood around with caps off and heads bent.

"After saying this tribute to the dead he turned to the captain, saying: "Please communicate this event to the parents or families of the men buried here."

"When visiting the hospitals he always carries this with him, and gives them to the wounded. In a Galician base hospital a young soldier was about to return to the front again, recovering from a slight wound, when the Emperor came. "Would you like to get home for a while, my boy?" he asked, and then gave the order "Give him three weeks' leave."

"I once saw him looking at a tired transport of Russian prisoners. He stopped the column and approached the prisoners. An interpreter was directed to ask them if they knew who he (the Emperor) was. The men looked at him and said: "German General." Not one of them recognized the Emperor. When this was made clear to the Emperor he waved his arm and said, "Take them away!"

CARRIED BY A NURSE.

How An English Girl Saved A Wounded Soldier.

The correspondent of the Algemeen Handelsblad, in a letter "from the English front," tells the following story of an English nurse:

"After the terrible life at the front I was now far from the trenches and I was walking along a sunken road when, rounding a curve, I suddenly saw a bent figure slowly moving forward. It was a girl of not more than 23 years of age, carrying on her shoulder a young English infantryman. The young man had been shot through the shoulder, and after a preliminary dressing of the wound had been told to go to the nearest field hospital. But, taking a wrong turning, I had lost his way, and had wandered on along lanes and by paths until he collapsed and fainted."

"In this state the young woman—to was an English nurse—accidentally found him. As it was at least half an hour's walk to the nearest field hospital she decided to carry him there. The brave and resolute girl readily accepted my assistance. We utilized my overcoat as a stretcher, and thus we carried our wounded man together to the hospital. After receiving a satisfactory report from the doctor the young girl proceeded once more on her walk."

WEDDING GIFTS FOR RAILWAY GIRLS.

Marriage dowries are offered to girl railway clerks. The new workers who have taken the places of men are engaged chiefly in routine duties, such as abstracting and logging, and already the conditions of labour have been standardized in several companies. The London and South-Western Railway give marriage dowries of £1 for every year's service, with a maximum of £10; the North-Eastern Railway £2 for every year's service, with a maximum of £20; and the Great Northern Railway £10 if the girl has been in the company's service for five years. At the headquarters of the Railway Clerks' Association, says the "Daily Mail," the number of women clerks is increasing so rapidly that it is impossible to estimate the total from week to week. Among the men who were left there was a strong feeling that women clerks should be placed on the same rates of pay as men; that they should work under the same conditions, and subscribe to a superannuation fund as the men do. As it is not considered reasonable for girls to start very early in the morning or stay till the late hours at night, the men are working the awkward periods.

though too late, that he has spoiled the child; but when this conviction, with its dire consequences, is borne home to his mind, he wisely takes steps to remedy the evil, without awakening the consciousness and potential opposition of the victim. Those responsible for Government must, to-day, without delay, take corresponding action to rectify the baneful influences of the recent past, and we see in the National Register a means to this end. What is needed on the part of all, and in the interests all, is a determination by the Government to make everyone feel that on each individual rests the duty of utilising his physical or mental qualities to accomplish his share of the work which must now be carried out without loss of time. The registration paper enables the Government to ascertain the number of men of military age, and at the same time to divide up those engaged upon an capable of undertaking work to feed the fighting forces with all the requisites of warfare at home and abroad. It will then be possible to allocate to each work he is capable of accomplishing, and to line up all who, by reason of their physical fitness and their inability to carry on the industries of the country, ought to be trained for the fighting line. All this must be accomplished by compulsory edict. The time has passed for voluntary action.

The above is the burden of a tirade which, in our opinion, is conspicuous chiefly for its ingrained party prejudice. If compulsion is necessary, let Lord Kitchener announce the fact, clearly. If the voluntary system is inadequate in the present great emergency no member of the Cabinet—no matter what his views may long have been regarding the merits or demerits of compulsion, and voluntarism—will hesitate to act according to the best interests of the country. Such party rancour as is revealed in the above and the personalities shown in the so-called "Conspiracy against the Cabinet" which, according to Reuters, is "made a feature" by a London contemporary, are deplorable at the present time when party politics are unavailing. It is sane patriotism, not political rivalry, that the country demands from its political leaders, and the sooner the better for all concerned that such views should be comprehended both in and out of Parliament.

Whether a Cabinet more suited to the needs of the hour could be formed by the exclusion of Mr. Asquith, Sir Edward Grey and Mr. Balfour—all of whom have rendered excellent service to the country—is at least debatable. To most people—to those at least not obsessed by party rancour—the substitution of any two of these illustrious statesmen in place of Sir E. Carson and Lord Curzon, will appear at least ludicrous. Party intrigues might welcome such a change, but emphatically the country and the Empire will denounce it. If compulsion is necessary the country, as a whole, will learn of it soon enough from Mr. Asquith, Sir E. Grey and Mr. Balfour, in whom they have implicit trust.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE CLUB.

NEW PAVILION OPENED.

Mr. E. A. Irving, the Director of Education, last evening declared open the new up-to-date pavilion at the Queen's College Recreation Club.

Those present included Mr. T. K. Denly, Headmaster of Queen's College, Mr. R. E. Bellis, R. Ralph, A. W. Grant, B. James, A. Ormiston (a visitor from New Zealand), H. R. Wells, J. Ralston, and other members of the College staff, Major Humphreys, R.E., and numerous Chinese residents.

In the opening speech the Headmaster said:—

The compact little building in front of which we are standing, owes its existence to the activity of the Queen's College Games Committee—a body which was called into existence, about three years ago, for the better control of our games. For many years I had personally watched the slow but unmistakable growth of a liking for games among our scholars. I clearly recall that the first of middle school boys who were still hired and thrived in the old Central School—the site of which is now occupied by the Bellis Public Girls' School—there was positively not a single square inch of play ground for the scholars. It is difficult in these war-stricken days, to realise what that really means. At recess the crowded class rooms simply flowed out into the passages and corridors, and into the neighbouring streets, nothing else was possible. No games of any kind were ever played. Strangest fact of all, no scholars apparently wanted to play games; violent effort of any kind seemed to be looked upon as undignified. When we migrated to our present roomy premises, it is no exaggeration to say, that boys had to be taught, by easy stages, how to use the play grounds. And it was quite a perceptible time—years in fact—before they could be seen making free and legitimate use of the playing areas. It is, however, only in quite recent times that games have been organised. One of the last things that our former head master did, was to get the P.W.D. to lay down a Tennis Court in the Quadrangle. During the past five years, things athletic have moved with surprising and irresistible rapidity.

As I said earlier, some three years ago, a Games Committee was formed, of which, you, Sir, were the Hon. Chairman. At Queen's College, the restricted size of the play grounds only permits of certain games being properly played—Badminton, Tennis, Cricket, at most two or three cricket pitches, and Table Tennis. First of all, we had to come later. Football, a game in which our boys take a peculiar interest, needs larger space than we have at the College. At this juncture, that the Government, ever willing to listen to appeals for aid, promised that the particular site, well as for the ornamental palm fence in each end, and decorative pot plant.

The individual members of the Games Committee, without exception, have all given ungrudgingly of their spare moments to the many and worrying details involved in the scheme, and in this connection, I should like specially to mention the names of Mr. Grant and Mr. Edwards. The boys themselves, as though in evidence of appreciation of what has been done for them, have this year given many convincing proofs of their athletic prowess in athletics, and, at the present moment, on exhibition from the Head Master's Office, there are in the Pavilion, trophies for Swimming, Volley Ball and Football. At the recent meeting of the Victorian Athletic Federation in the Victoria Park, the school swimmers, thanks to the careful coaching of Mr. Johnston, carried off the very great majority of prizes.

The whole area outside the football ground, it may be noticed, has sufficient space for several tennis courts. And the well as for the ornamental palm fence in each end, and decorative pot plant.

The Director of Education spoke of the pleasure he gave him to do that duty because, as far as he knew it was the first occasion on which Hongkong Schools had followed the Schools at Edinburgh in providing their own pavilion. The College boys had deprived themselves of luxuries to a degree and had subscribed to a common fund which had bought that charming Pavilion. Mr. Carpenter, the architect, and the old boys, who had built the school, deserved special thanks. What they have done was without going in hand to the Government and he thought such a spirit of independence should be encouraged. Locally independence was a notable fact in the Chinese character which was a pleasing monument in that Pavilion.

At the occasion the Director of Education accepted a handsomely engraved silver key, with which he declared the new building open.

IT NEVER FAILS.

CHAMBERLAIN'S Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is all its name implies. It cures diarrhoea and dysentery in children or adults, and the most violent cases of cramp colic or pain in the stomach give way to a few doses of this medicine. Safe, sure, always cures. FUTILE GERMAN ATTACKS AND CANNONADING.

Paris, Oct. 22.

Two further futile German attacks in Artois and reference to most violent bombardments in Champagne are features of a communique just issued.

The Germans are particularly commending the districts of Tahure and Mesnil. French guns responded with blanketing fire, which was observed to be most effective against the German batteries and trenches.

A "CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE CABINET"

London, Oct. 22.

The Daily Chronicle makes a feature of what it calls a "conspiracy against the Cabinet," which, it is stated, is aiming at the expulsion of Mr. Asquith, Sir Edward Grey, and Mr. Balfour and the inclusion of Sir E. Carson, Lord Milner, with Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Churchill the only Liberal members thereof with Lord Curzon's Foreign Secretary.

The journal says that the position of Mr. Lloyd George, in withdrawing is peculiar, as he is most loyal to Mr. Asquith; but he is also a strong believer in Conservatism. He made two most significant appointments this week—Sir Chichester Miles to be his Parliamentary Secretary and Mr. Arthur Lee to be his Military Secretary to the Ministry of Munitions. Both appointments are strong conservatism.

HEAVY FIGHTING AT SEVERAL POINTS.

Petrograd, Oct. 22.

KING ALBERT AND THE POPE.

Rome, Oct. 22.

His Holiness the Pope has received a reply from the King of the Belgians to an autograph letter, in which His Holiness begged His Majesty to initiate steps towards peace. The King thanked Pope Benedict for the latter's promise to use all his influence to obtain the evacuation of Belgium by the Germans as a condition of peace and declared he would never lay down his sword while the country was in slavery.

The Pope was greatly disappointed at the result of his appeal.

FURTHER ITALIAN SUCCESSES.

Rome, Oct. 22.

A communique says that the Italians have had further successes in the Tyrol and the Trentino. They stormed the fortified mounts of Meino and Setole, in the Giudicaria and Suga Valleys respectively, destroyed entanglements, and exploded mine-barricades in Cordevole and Palazzone preparatory to further attacks.

LAST EFFORT FOR VOLUNTARISM.

Lord Derby's Appeal.

London, Oct. 22.

Lord Derby, Director of Recruiting, has issued a letter to every "unentered" man, emphasizing that his plan was the last effort for Voluntarism, and recalling that Mr. Asquith had pledged England to support the Allies to the utmost of our power. The pledge was given on behalf of the nation, and was endorsed by all parties. Every man of military age and fitness must bear his share in redeeming it. He appeals to everyone to consider, in view of the fact that the country was fighting for its very existence, whether the reasons for non-enlistment hitherto held valid now hold good.

Lord Derby is also addressing a letter to every employer, appealing for co-operation, and especially for a promise to keep men's places open. "The War Office notices that enlistment under Lord Derby's scheme is impossible till early next week, a Royal Warrant being necessary."
